

FINITY DAYBELL.

Born March 14, 1815, Lincolnshire, Eng.
Came to Utah September, 1864, Joseph
Rawlins Company. High Priest; Ward
Teacher.

602

DAYBELL, FINITY (son of Samuel and Rebecca Ann Day-bell of Lincolnshire, Eng.). Born March 14, 1815, in Lincolnshire. Came to Utah Sept. 20, 1864, Joseph S. Rawlins company.

Married Mary Draper March 10, 1841, Falkingham, Eng.
(daughter of Richard Draper and Ann Green of Lincolnshire). She was born Jan. 6, 1820, Lincolnshire, Eng. and died Sept. 2, 1899. Their children: Robert b. July 3, 1842, m.
Agnes Ann Bancroft; Annie b. April 14, 1846, m. William Webster; Susan b. Aug. 14, 1849, m. John Pollard; m. George Carlile; Sarah b. March 11, 1851, m. George T. Giles; George
T. b. Aug. 2, 1852, m. Sarah Ann Carlile; Elizabeth b. July 27, 1853, m. Franklin M. Giles; William b. Feb. 24, 1858, m.
Annie Price. Family home Charleston, Utah.

High priest; ward teacher. Settled at Charleston Dec. 24, 1864, and died there Oct. 25, 1897.

840

Finity Daybell was born March 14, 1815, at Lincolnshire, England. Married Mary Draper March 10, 1841, at Falkingham, England. She was born January 6, 1820 at Lincolnshire, England. Both children of farmers. Finity died October 25, 1897 and Mary died September 2, 1899.

Finity and Mary Daybell were converts to the LDS Church and emigrated to the United States in 1864, arriving at Charleston December 24, 1864. The oldest son, Robert, remained in England to be married and came to America two years later. While crossing the plains near the Platte River in Wyoming, Robert and a companion went out to hunt game and he was never seen nor heard of again. He left a young wife and baby to come to Salt Lake alone.

At Charleston they settled on 160 acres which had to be cleared for farming. They were confronted with many hardships. On one occasion, they were forced to move to Heber City for protection against the Indians, who stole and killed their animals.

1025

Mary was an ardent Relief Society worker for many years and was called to be a counselor to Emma Brown the first president of the Wasatch Stake Relief Society. She worked in this capacity for 16 years. They were instrumental in the work of building roads, bridges and homes in the settling of Wasatch County.

They were the parents of eight children who lived and three who died in England.

Robert, their oldest son, married Agnes Bancroft in England and was lost while crossing the plains. He had two daughters, Mary Hannah Daybell who married George
Price and Kate Daybell who married Levi Snow.

George Daybell (first) died in infancy.

Ann Daybell, who married William Webster before leaving England, came to America and settled in Charleston.

Susan Daybell came with her parents to America as a young girl. She married John Pollard and then after his death married
George Carlile. She had no children.

Sarah Daybell married George Thomas
Giles and they were the parents of 13 children.

George Daybell (second) married Sarah Ann Carlile and they had four sons. He was a successful farmer until his death when he was struck with lightning.

Elizabeth Daybell married Franklin Giles.
They had no children.

William Daybell, the youngest son, came to America at the age of six with the other children. He married Annie Price and was a successful farmer, and active in Church and civic affairs. He and his wife had 11 children.

FINITY AND MARY DRAPER DAYBELL

Finity Daybell was born March 14, 1815, at Lincolnshire, England. Married Mary Draper March 10, 1841, at Falkingham, England. She was born January 6, 1820 at Lincolnshire, England. Both children of farmers. Finity died October 25, 1897 and Mary died September 2, 1899.

Finity and Mary Daybell were converts to the LDS Church and emigrated to the United States in 1864, arriving at Charleston December 24, 1864. The oldest son, Robert, remained in England to be married and came to America two years later. While crossing the plains near the Platte River in Wyoming, Robert and a companion went out to hunt game and he was never seen nor heard of again. He left a young wife and baby to come to Salt Lake alone.

At Charleston they settled on 160 acres which had to be cleared for farming. They were confronted with many hardships. On one occasion, they were forced to move to Heber City for protection against the Indians, who stole and killed their animals.

1025

1025

Mary was an ardent Relief Society worker for many years and was called to be a counselor to Emma Brown the first president of the Wasatch Stake Relief Society. She worked in this capacity for 16 years. They were instrumental in the work of building roads, bridges and homes in the settling of Wasatch County.

They were the parents of eight children who lived and three who died in England.

Robert, their oldest son, married Agnes Bancroft in England and was lost while crossing the plains. He had two daughters, Mary Hannah Daybell who married George Price and Kate Daybell who married Levi Snow.

George Daybell (first) died in infancy.

Ann Daybell, who married William Webster before leaving England, came to America and settled in Charleston.

Susan Daybell came with her parents to America as a young girl. She married John Pollard and then after his death married George Carlile. She had no children.

Sarah Daybell married George Thomas Giles and they were the parents of 13 children.

George Daybell (second) married Sarah Ann Carlile and they had four sons. He was a successful farmer until his death when he was struck with lightning.

Elizabeth Daybell married Franklin Giles. They had no children.

William Daybell, the youngest son, came to America at the age of six with the other children. He married Annie Price and was a successful farmer, and active in Church and civic affairs. He and his wife had 11 children.

FINNY AND MARY DRAPER DAYBELL

Finny Daybell was born March 14, 1815, at Lancelshire, England. Married Mary Draper March 10, 1841, at Fiskingham, England. She was born January 6, 1820 at Lancelshire, England. Both children of farmers. Finny died October 25, 1897 and Mary died September 2, 1899.

Finny and Mary Daybell were converts to the LDS Church and emigrated to the United States in 1864, arriving at Charleston December 24, 1864. The oldest son, Robert, remained in England to be married and came to America two years later. While crossing the plains near the Platte River in Wyoming, Robert and a companion went out to hunt game and he was never seen nor heard of again. He left a young wife and baby to come to Salt Lake alone.

At Charleston they settled on 160 acres which had to be cleared for farming. They were confronted with many hardships. On one occasion, they were forced to move to Heber City for protection against the Indians, who stole and killed their animals.

Mary was an ardent Relief Society worker for many years and was called to be a counsellor to Emma Brown the first president of the Wasatch Stake Relief Society. She worked in this capacity for 16 years. They were instrumental in the work of building roads, bridges and homes in the settling of Wasatch County.

They were the parents of eight children who lived and three who died in England.

Robert, their oldest son, married Agnes Banerott in England and was lost while crossing the plains. He had two daughters, Mary Hannah Daybell who married George Price and Kate Daybell who married Levi Snow.

George Daybell (first) died in infancy. Ann Daybell, who married William Webster before leaving England, came to America and settled in Charleston.

Susan Daybell came with her parents to America as a young girl. She married John Pollard and then after his death married George Carble. She had no children.

Sarah Daybell married George Thomas Giles and they were the parents of 13 children.

George Daybell (second) married Sarah Ann Carble and they had four sons. He was a successful farmer until his death when he was struck with lightning.

Elizabeth Daybell married Franklin Giles. They had no children.

William Daybell, the youngest son, came to America at the age of six with the other children. He married Annie Price and was a successful farmer, and active in Church and civic affairs. He and his wife had 11 children.

Mary was an ardent Relief Society worker for many years and was called to be a counselor to Emma Brown the first president of the Wasatch Stake Relief Society. She

FINITY AND MARY DRAPER DAYBELL

Finity Daybell was born March 14, 1815, at Lincolnshire, England. Married Mary Draper March 10, 1841, at Falkingham, England. She was born January 6, 1820 at Lincolnshire, England. Both children of farmers. Finity died October 25, 1897 and Mary died September 2, 1899.

Finity and Mary Daybell were converts to the LDS Church and emigrated to the United States in 1864, arriving at Charleston December 24, 1864. The oldest son, Robert, remained in England to be married and came to America two years later. While crossing the plains near the Platte River in Wyoming, Robert and a companion went out to hunt game and he was never seen nor heard of again. He left a young wife and baby to come to Salt Lake alone.

At Charleston they settled on 160 acres which had to be cleared for farming. They were confronted with many hardships. On one occasion, they were forced to move to Heber City for protection against the Indians, who stole and killed their animals.

FINITY A

Finity Daybell was born March 14, 1815, at Lincolnshire, England. Married Mary Draper March 10, 1841, at Falkingham, England. She was born January 6, 1820 at Lincolnshire, England. Both children of farmers. Finity died October 25, 1897 and Mary died September 2, 1899.

Finity and Mary Daybell were converts to the LDS Church and emigrated to the United States in 1864, arriving at Charleston December 24, 1864. The oldest son, Robert, remained in England to be married and came to America two years later. While crossing the plains near the Platte River in Wyoming, Robert and a companion went out to hunt game and he was never seen nor heard of again. He left a young wife and baby to come to Salt Lake alone.

At Charleston they settled on 160 acres which had to be cleared for farming. They were confronted with many hardships. On one occasion, they were forced to move to Heber City for protection against the Indians, who stole and killed their animals.

Giles and they were the parents of 13 children.

George Daybell (second) married Sarah Ann Carlile and they had four sons. He was a successful farmer until his death when he was struck with lightning.

Elizabeth Daybell married Franklin Giles. They had no children.

William Daybell, the youngest son, came to America at the age of six with the other children. He married Annie Price and was a successful farmer, and active in Church and civic affairs. He and his wife had 11 children.

Society worker d to be a coun-rst president of Society. She
6 years. They rk of building
the settling of eight children

in England.
married Agnes as lost while
two daughters.
married George married Levi

in infancy.
William Web-
ame to Ameri-

er parents to married John

FINITY AND MARY DRAPER DAYBELL

Finity Daybell was born March 14, 1815, at Lincolnshire, England. Married Mary Draper March 10, 1841, at Falkingham, England. She was born January 6, 1820 at Lincolnshire, England. Both children of farmers. Finity died October 25, 1897 and Mary died September 2, 1899.

Finity and Mary Daybell were converts to the LDS Church and emigrated to the United States in 1864, arriving at Charleston December 24, 1864. The oldest son, Robert, remained in England to be married and came to America two years later. While crossing the plains near the Platte River in Wyoming, on went out to hunt er seen nor heard of ng wife and baby to ie.

settled on 160 acres
ed for farming. They many hardships. On re forced to move to ction against the Intilled their animals.

Mary was an ardent Relief Society worker for many years and was called to be a counselor to Emma Brown the first president of the Wasatch Stake Relief Society. She worked in this capacity for 16 years. They were instrumental in the work of building roads, bridges and homes in the settling of Wasatch County.

They were the parents of eight children who lived and three who died in England.

Robert, their oldest son, married Agnes Bancroft in England and was lost while crossing the plains. He had two daughters, Mary Hannah Daybell who married George Price and Kate Daybell who married Levi Snow.

George Daybell (first) died in infancy.

Ann Daybell, who married William Webster before leaving England, came to America and settled in Charleston.

Susan Daybell came with her parents to America as a young girl. She married John Pollard and then after his death married George Carlile. She had no children.

Sarah Daybell married George Thomas Giles and they were the parents of 13 children.

George Daybell (second) married Sarah Ann Carlile and they had four sons. He was a successful farmer until his death when he was struck with lightning.

Elizabeth Daybell married Franklin Giles. They had no children.

William Daybell, the youngest son, came to America at the age of six with the other children. He married Annie Price and was a successful farmer, and active in Church and civic affairs. He and his wife had 11 children.

FINITY AND MARY DRAPER DAYBELL

Finity Daybell was born March 14, 1815, at Lincolnshire, England. Married Mary Draper March 10, 1841, at Falkingham, England. She was born January 6, 1820 at Lincolnshire, England. Both children of farmers. Finity died October 25, 1897 and Mary died September 2, 1899.

Finity and Mary Daybell were converts to the LDS Church and emigrated to the United States in 1864, arriving at Charleston December 24, 1864. The oldest son, Robert, remained in England to be married and came to America two years later. While crossing the plains near the Platte River in Wyoming, Robert and a companion went out to hunt game and he was never seen nor heard of again. He left a young wife and baby to come to Salt Lake alone.

At Charleston they settled on 160 acres which had to be cleared for farming. They were confronted with many hardships. On one occasion, they were forced to move to Heber City for protection against the Indians, who stole and killed their animals.

1025

Mary was an ardent Relief Society worker for many years and was called to be a counselor to Emma Brown the first president of the Wasatch Stake Relief Society. She worked in this capacity for 16 years. They were instrumental in the work of building roads, bridges and homes in the settling of Wasatch County.

They were the parents of eight children who lived and three who died in England.

Robert, their oldest son, married Agnes Bancroft in England and was lost while crossing the plains. He had two daughters, Mary Hannah Daybell who married George Price and Kate Daybell who married Levi Snow.

George Daybell (first) died in infancy.

Ann Daybell, who married William Webster before leaving England, came to America and settled in Charleston.

Susan Daybell came with her parents to America as a young girl. She married John Pollard and then after his death married George Carlile. She had no children.

Sarah Daybell married George Thomas Giles and they were the parents of 13 children.

George Daybell (second) married Sarah Ann Carlile and they had four sons. He was a successful farmer until his death when he was struck with lightning.

Elizabeth Daybell married Franklin Giles. They had no children.

William Daybell, the youngest son, came to America at the age of six with the other children. He married Annie Price and was a successful farmer, and active in Church and civic affairs. He and his wife had 11 children.

FINITY AND MARY DRAPER DAYBELL

Finity Daybell was born March 14, 1815, at Lincolnshire, England. Married Mary Draper March 10, 1841, at Falkingham, England. She was born January 6, 1820 at Lincolnshire, England. Both children of farmers. Finity died October 25, 1897 and Mary died September 2, 1899.

Finity and Mary Daybell were converts to the LDS Church and emigrated to the United States in 1864, arriving at Charleston December 24, 1864. The oldest son, Robert, remained in England to be married and came to America two years later. While crossing the plains near the Platte River in Wyoming, Robert and a companion went out to hunt game and he was never seen nor heard of again. He left a young wife and baby to come to Salt Lake alone.

At Charleston they settled on 160 acres which had to be cleared for farming. They were confronted with many hardships. On one occasion, they were forced to move to Heber City for protection against the Indians, who stole and killed their animals.

1025

Mary was an ardent Relief Society worker for many years and was called to be a counselor to Emma Brown the first president of the Wasatch Stake Relief Society. She worked in this capacity for 16 years. They were instrumental in the work of building roads, bridges and homes in the settling of Wasatch County.

They were the parents of eight children who lived and three who died in England.

Robert, their oldest son, married Agnes Bancroft in England and was lost while crossing the plains. He had two daughters, Mary Hannah Daybell who married George Price and Kate Daybell who married Levi Snow.

George Daybell (first) died in infancy.

Ann Daybell, who married William Webster before leaving England, came to America and settled in Charleston.

Susan Daybell came with her parents to America as a young girl. She married John Pollard and then after his death married George Carlile. She had no children.

Sarah Daybell married George Thomas Giles and they were the parents of 13 children.

George Daybell (second) married Sarah Ann Carlile and they had four sons. He was a successful farmer until his death when he was struck with lightning.

Elizabeth Daybell married Franklin Giles. They had no children.

William Daybell, the youngest son, came to America at the age of six with the other children. He married Annie Price and was a successful farmer, and active in Church and civic affairs. He and his wife had 11 children.

FINITY AND MARY DRAPER
DAYBELL

Finity Daybell was born March 14, 1815, at Lincolnshire, England. Married Mary Draper March 10, 1841, at Falkingham, England. She was born January 6, 1820 at Lincolnshire, England. Both children of farmers. Finity died October 25, 1897 and Mary died September 2, 1899.

Finity and Mary Daybell were converts to the LDS Church and emigrated to the United States in 1864, arriving at Charleston December 24, 1864. The oldest son, Robert, remained in England to be married and came to America two years later. While crossing the plains near the Platte River in Wyoming, Robert and a companion went out to hunt game and he was never seen nor heard of again. He left a young wife and baby to come to Salt Lake alone.

At Charleston they settled on 160 acres which had to be cleared for farming. They were confronted with many hardships. On one occasion, they were forced to move to Heber City for protection against the Indians who stole and killed their animals.

1025

Mary was an ardent Relief Society worker for many years and was called to be a counselor to Emma Brown the first president of the Wasatch Stake Relief Society. She worked in this capacity for 16 years. They were instrumental in the work of building roads, bridges and homes in the settling of Wasatch County.

They were the parents of eight children who lived and three who died in England.

Robert, their oldest son, married Agnes Bancroft in England and was lost while crossing the plains. He had two daughters, Mary Hannah Daybell who married George Price and Kate Daybell who married Levi Snow.

George Daybell (first) died in infancy.

Ann Daybell, who married William Webster before leaving England, came to America and settled in Charleston.

Susan Daybell came with her parents to America as a young girl. She married John Pollard and then after his death married George Carlile. She had no children.

Sarah Daybell married George Thomas Giles and they were the parents of 13 children.

George Daybell (second) married Sarah Ann Carlile and they had four sons. He was a successful farmer until his death when he was struck with lightning.

Elizabeth Daybell married Franklin Giles. They had no children.

William Daybell, the youngest son, came to America at the age of six with the other children. He married Annie Price and was a successful farmer, and active in Church and civic affairs. He and his wife had 11 children.

FINNEY AND MARY DRAPIER DAVIBELL.

Mary was an ardent Relief Society worker for many years and was called to be a counselor to Emma Brown the first president of the Wasatch Stake Relief Society. She worked in this capacity for 16 years. They were instrumental in the work of building roads, bridges and homes in the settling of Wasatch County.

They were the parents of eight children who lived and three who died in England.

Robert their oldest son married Agnes Barnhart in England and was lost while crossing the plains. He had two daughters, Mary Hannah Davibell who married George Price and Kate Davibell who married Levi Snow.

George Davibell, eldest died in infancy. Ann Davibell who married William Wells later became the first English settler in America and worked in Charleston.

Susan Davibell came with her parents to America as a young girl. She married John Pollard and then after his death married George Carble. She had no children.

Sarah Davibell married George Thomas Gibbs and they were the parents of 13 children.

George Davibell eventually married Sarah Ann Carble and they had four sons. The sons were a successful farmer until his death when he was struck with lightning.

Elizabeth Davibell married Frederick Gibbs. They had no children.

William Davibell the youngest son came to America at the age of six with the other children. He married Anne Price and was a successful farmer and active in Church and civic affairs. He and his wife had 11 children.

Finney Davibell was born March 14 1815 at Llandovery, England. Married Mary Dora March 16 1841 at Fairbairn, England. She was born January 6 1835 at Fairbairn, England. Both children of James and Mary Davibell. He died October 28 1890 and she died September 2 1899.

Finney and Mary Davibell were converts to the LDS Church and emigrated to the Utah Settlement 1894 arriving at Clarksburg, Texas on 24 1894. The oldest son Robert married to England to be married and came to America two years later. While on ship he died on the Pacific River in Mexico.

Robert died a companion with a wife and a son who was married and had a son and a daughter. He left a widow and a son to be married to a wife and a son.

A. E. Davibell, the second son, the son of the first son, was born in England. He was married and had a son and a daughter. He was married and had a son and a daughter.

William Davibell, the youngest son, came to America at the age of six with the other children. He married Anne Price and was a successful farmer and active in Church and civic affairs. He and his wife had 11 children.

FINNEY DAVIBELL.
Born March 14, 1815, Llandovery, Eng.
Came to Utah September, 1894, at age 78.
Ravens Company. High Priest, Ward
Teacher.

602

FINNEY DAVIBELL.
Born March 14, 1815, Llandovery, Eng.
Came to Utah September, 1894, at age 78.
Ravens Company. High Priest, Ward
Teacher.

602

FINITY AND MARY, DRAPER DAYBELL

Finity Daybell was born March 14, 1815, at Lincolnshire, England. Married Mary Draper March 10, 1841, at Falkingham, England. She was born January 6, 1820 at Lincolnshire, England. Both children of farmers. Finity died October 25, 1897 and Mary died September 2, 1899.

Finity and Mary Daybell were converts to the LDS Church and emigrated to the United States in 1864, arriving at Charleston December 24, 1864. The oldest son, Robert, remained in England to be married and came to America two years later. While crossing the plains near the Platte River in Wyoming, Robert and a companion went out to hunt game and he was never seen nor heard of again. He left a young wife and baby to come to Salt Lake alone.

At Charleston they settled on 160 acres which had to be cleared for farming. They were confronted with many hardships. On one occasion, they were forced to move to Heber City for protection against the Indians, who stole and killed their animals.

1025

Mary was an ardent Relief Society worker for many years and was called to be a counselor to Emma Brown the first president of the Wasatch Stake Relief Society. She worked in this capacity for 16 years. They were instrumental in the work of building roads, bridges and homes in the settling of Wasatch County.

They were the parents of eight children who lived and three who died in England.

Robert, their oldest son, married Agnes Bancroft in England and was lost while crossing the plains. He had two daughters, Mary Hannah Daybell who married George Price and Kate Daybell who married Levi Snow.

George Daybell (first) died in infancy.

Ann Daybell, who married William Webster before leaving England, came to America and settled in Charleston.

Susan Daybell came with her parents to America as a young girl. She married John Pollard and then after his death married George Carlile. She had no children.

Sarah Daybell married George Thomas Giles and they were the parents of 13 children.

George Daybell (second) married Sarah Ann Carlile and they had four sons. He was a successful farmer until his death when he was struck with lightning.

Elizabeth Daybell married Franklin Giles. They had no children.

William Daybell, the youngest son, came to America at the age of six with the other children. He married Annie Price and was a successful farmer, and active in Church and civic affairs. He and his wife had 11 children.

FINITY AND MARY DRAPER DAYBELL

Finity Daybell was born March 14, 1815, at Lincolnshire, England. Married Mary Draper March 10, 1841, at Falkingham, England. She was born January 6, 1820 at Lincolnshire, England. Both children of farmers. Finity died October 25, 1897 and Mary died September 2, 1899.

Finity and Mary Daybell were converts to the LDS Church and emigrated to the United States in 1864, arriving at Charleston December 24, 1864. The oldest son, Robert, remained in England to be married and came to America two years later. While crossing the plains near the Platte River in Wyoming, Robert and a companion went out to hunt game and he was never seen nor heard of again. He left a young wife and baby to come to Salt Lake alone.

At Charleston they settled on 160 acres which had to be cleared for farming. They were confronted with many hardships. On one occasion, they were forced to move to Heber City for protection against the Indians, who stole and killed their animals.

1025

Mary was an ardent Relief Society worker for many years and was called to be a counselor to Emma Brown the first president of the Wasatch Stake Relief Society. She worked in this capacity for 16 years. They were instrumental in the work of building roads, bridges and homes in the settling of Wasatch County.

They were the parents of eight children who lived and three who died in England.

Robert, their oldest son, married Agnes Bancroft in England and was lost while crossing the plains. He had two daughters, Mary Hannah Daybell who married George Price and Kate Daybell who married Levi Snow.

George Daybell (first) died in infancy.

Ann Daybell, who married William Webster before leaving England, came to America and settled in Charleston.

Susan Daybell came with her parents to America as a young girl. She married John Pollard and then after his death married George Carlile. She had no children.

Sarah Daybell married George Thomas Giles and they were the parents of 13 children.

George Daybell (second) married Sarah Ann Carlile and they had four sons. He was a successful farmer until his death when he was struck with lightning.

Elizabeth Daybell married Franklin Giles. They had no children.

William Daybell, the youngest son, came to America at the age of six with the other children. He married Annie Price and was a successful farmer, and active in Church and civic affairs. He and his wife had 11 children.